SUMMER 2010

2010 Convention - Election Results In Many New Board Members

CALIFORNIA STATE COUNCIL ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Steve Mackey, President

Vietnam Veterans of America (VVA) Chapter 47 in Riverside saw four of its members elected to the California VVA State Council (CSC) board of directors at the biennial convention and election in Fresno and elected several new officers including a new president, Steve Mackey (VVA Chapter 47) who was Southern District vice-president for the last two years. Also from Chapter 47 was Tom Hohmann elected secretary, a position he has held for several years. Michael Kennedy, elected as Southern District vice-president, and Ed Ryan, PhD, elected as the At-Large vice-president are both new to the CSC board this year.

Also moving up was Dennis 'Doc' Croucher (VVA Chapter 368) of Catheys Valley to 1st vice-president. Croucher has been on the board for several years as Central District vice-president.

VVA Chapter 391 saw two of its members elected to the board. Dick Southern of Tuolumne was re-elected as 2nd vice-president and also serves on the National board of directors as Region 9 director. Having served as Finance Committee chair for the last two years, Barry Schloffel of Sonora was elected Treasurer.

Also new to the Board of Directors is Dean Gotham (VVA Chapter 951) of Clearlake who was elected as the Northern District vice-president. Alan Cook (VVA Chapter 400) of Castro Valley who served on the board several years ago and on the National board was elected as Central District vice-president.

At their first board meeting on the last day of the convention, several committee members were appointed by President Mackey. Ken Holybee, a former president, was re-appointed to Government Affairs. George Eldridge was re-appointed as Public Affairs. Alan Cook was appointed as the Finance Committee chair, Kate O'Hare Palmer was reappointed as Women Veterans and PTSD committees and Donald Barnard was appointed Membership chair. Michael Kennedy was appointed to the Constitution Committee chair. Dick Southern was again named as the Meeting Planner. Robert Johnston, the immediate past president was appointed to the POW/MIA committee chair.

The CSC, as part of the National VVA organization founded in 1978, helps Vietnam veterans in their continual struggle for fair treatment in consideration of their service and sacrifice for their country and to change the public's perception of the Vietnam Veteran. This is in light of VVA's founding principle that "Never again will one generation of veterans abandon another." (see convention photos page 3)

PRESIDENTS MESSAGE

I would like to thank Bob Johnston for his service as the CSC President for the last two years. Bob will continue to be involved with CSC as he will be the Chairperson of the POW/MIA committee and he will continue as the Chairperson for the CSC Motorcycle Group.

I want to thank all those who attended the wonderful convention we had in June. It was well attended and I think we all had a good time. I especially want to thank the Convention Committee, Dick, Carol, Elayne and Wren Goodwine, for the long hours and all the hard work they put into making this convention a success.

Congratulations to Chapter 391 for all the awards they received as they kind of ran away with everything and they deserved to.. This should be an incentive for all the California chapters to get busy for these next two years with their newsletters and web sites and hopefully submit their respective chapters for the awards that will be presented in June 2012.

A big thanks to those who participated in the putting contest we held on Thursday during the afternoon get together. We were able to raise $550.00 for the Brian Forrest Scholarship Fund. Jerry Yamamoto was the big winner followed by the Martinez brothers from Chapter 472. The honorable Mr. Adkins, from Chapter 47, won the prize for the ugliest shirt worn during the putting contest. My eyes are still hurting.

At the next CSC BOD meeting we will be talking about the scholarship program and how we will be implementing it again next year. We will be looking at making it a scholarship for a Wounded Veteran.

I have been asked what my vision is for the CA. State Council over the next two years. I have never been a long term vision kind of guy. The CSC is not a board of one, we are 10 strong and that includes our CA. AVVA State President. To this list we can add all of our state chapters, and delegates that attend our CSC meetings.

So when asked what my vision is, I will reply, "It's not my vision. It's our vision."

"What part do you want to play in this vision?"

Thanks everyone, see you in August.

CSC MINORITY AFFAIRS

Jerry Yamamoto, State Committee Chair

The National Minority Affairs Committee will have a booth at the August Leadership Conference in Orlando, Florida. At our booth those who are attending can view a DVD that the committee prepared on understanding the methods for the recruitment of minority veterans. Hand-outs and committee members will also be available to provide tips on ways to understand, contact and recruit minority veterans.

The committee will be presenting its fourth National Diversity Award at the Leadership Conference to this year's honoree who has been selected for the award. The award recognizes outstanding achievement by an individual, business or organization in the promotion of diversity within the veteran's community. In 2006, the first year of the Diversity Award, the initial honoree for the award, was BG Ezell Ware, the former Deputy Adjutant General of the California National Guard. The identity of the 2010 nominee will be disclosed at the Conference.

In similar fashion, the California Minority Affairs Committee is developing its own diversity award to recognize the accomplishments of an outstanding California individual, business or organization and will be presented at a future CSC Convention. Information on the eligibility requirements and nomination process for the state Diversity Award will be placed on the CSC Web site and, also, published in future issues of the Zephyr. When the CSC Diversity Award is finally established, you will be notified that you can submit the name(s) of nominee(s) for the state award.

For information on diversity issues, you can contact your state minority affairs committee members who will be identified on the state website.

CHAPTER 464

Dear Vietnam Veterans,

As you may know, I worked with Steve Warren (VVA Chapter 464 namesake) over the course of 10 years on a medical mission to Vietnam. At the time, Steve had a non-profit called Mission Peace. We went to Vietnam and corrected lower limb deformities in Vietnamese children. Some of you may have donated to our group. Since Steve died, we have not been back.

We are returning to Can Tho almost three years from the date of our last mission. We are now called the International Extremity Project (IEP). As before with Mission Peace, we are a non-profit which relies on donations from individuals and groups. I was hoping you could support the IEP November 2010 medical mission with a tax deductible donation. This year marks my seventh trip to Vietnam to help the poor and physically challenged.

See our video at: <http://www.extremityproject.com/>

IEP is part of The International Children Assistance Network (ICAN), a (501)(c)(3) non-profit organization founded by a group of young Vietnamese professionals in April 2000. ICAN's mission is to help children realize their potential and become the quintessential member of their family and their community.

To contribute, mail a check written to ICAN: International Extremity Project 555 Lisbon Street San Francisco, CA 94112

CA AVVA

Elayne Mackey, President

CA Associates would like to send Congratulations to the newly elected 2010-2012 CSC Officers and Board of Directors. We (AVVA) look forward to working with you all.

Thank you to the past Officers and Board Directors for a good working relationship the past two years. CA Associates are very lucky to have such a great State Council to work beside. There are a lot of states that are not so lucky!

A very heartfelt thank you to all of the CA AVVA members that helped with the June 2010 State Convention. I know we worked you long hours and you did an outstanding job. What a team and it certainly shows our motto of "Working Together."

At the AVVA Luncheon during the State Convention we had a great turn out. Thanks again to our guest speaker Kate O'Hare Palmer, for an excellent slide show and talk. Welcome Home Kate and thank you for your service!

Also at the luncheon we honored our AVVA 2009-2010 member of the year, Carol Southern.

Carol is our AVVA State Treasurer and a great one too. Carol doesn't know what the word NO means and can always be counted on to be there, whether local, state or national. Carol is also retiring from being the AVVA National Region 9 Director at our 2010 AVVA Biennial meeting. She has been a great Regional Director. We decided that Carol can retire from that position but never from CA Associates.

CA Associates have ordered and received our state logo coffee cups. They are very nice and we will be selling them at the August CSC Meeting. I don't think you will be disappointed.

Our next Zephyr report will have all the latest from our AVVA Biennial Meeting/ Convention that will be held in Orlando FL. - August 10-15 2010.

My goal for that trip...to feed an alligator and survive the humidity. I just don't know which order that will be in. Welcome Home

WE MUST HEAL THE WOUNDS OF

WAR WE CANNOT SEE

Printed in Capitol Weekly, June 24, 2010 By Pete Conaty

For too long, America has been in denial about the true cost of war. We have honored our veterans with our lips but we have refused to acknowledge the wounds we don't see, the deep, painful psychological scars borne by so many of our veterans. Thankfully, we are at last beginning to recognize the depth of this problem. We are beginning to reach out a helping hand to those men and women who have borne the heat of battle and come home forever changed.

In his State of the State speech, Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger spoke eloquently and frankly about these wounded warriors and our obligation to make them whole again: "Too often our soldiers bring back the enemy with them in their heads. We are seeing and hearing all about a lot of post-traumatic stress syndrome... Those men and women need help."

California's concerted effort to help these veterans, however, dates back nearly three years, when the Armed Force Retirees Association, the Vietnam Veterans of America and other veterans groups won Governor Schwarzenegger's signature on AB 2586, a groundbreaking law designed to give our most traumatized soldiers a chance to confront and overcome the psychological wounds of war. Under this alternative sentencing law, a judge first determines if a defendant is suffering from combat-caused post traumatic stress disorder (PTSD).

If he is, the judge can steer the defendant into a psychological treatment program rather than jail. Without treatment, many of our fallen heroes would find themselves trapped in an unending cycle of crime and punishment as they struggle with their inner demons.

Eight months ago, the U. S. Supreme Court faced this issue and came down on the side of California's law in a landmark ruling on the impact of combat stress on veterans. In that case, the high court reduced the death sentence of Korean War veteran George Porter to life in prison. The Florida jury that sentenced Porter to death in a murder case did not know he had fought in some of the bloodiest battles of the war. He came back a "changed and traumatized man," the high court said. The sentencing jury would likely have spared Porter from the death penalty if it had known of his "horrifying" battlefield experiences, the justices said.

AB 2586 was the first bill in the United States that offered alternative sentencing to combat veterans of all wars. AB 2586 was cited by the Supreme Court in its ruling as evidence that changes concerning veterans with PTSD were being made by the judicial system.

This ruling is of major importance because it is the first time the first Supreme Court has recognized the long-term, traumatic impact of combat on our veterans. It will undoubtedly be cited in many cases throughout the nation. But the goal of California's law is not to spare veterans from the death penalty but to offer them the treatment that prevents their trauma from escalating out of control as it did for George Porter.

Perhaps if such a law was on the books when George Porter returned from Korea, he would have gotten treatment the first time he committed a minor crime, and not only his life but those of his victims would have been spared.

California has made a good start but the battle is not won. This year, a coalition of veterans groups, led by the Vietnam Veterans of America, is supporting AB 1925 by Assemblywoman Mary Salas. AB 1925 is a bill that would allow counties to establish courts for veterans, just as there are other special courts. Several counties, such as Orange, Santa Clara and San Bernardino, have already established veterans' courts. AB 1925 would provide a framework for those counties that wish to avoid the mistakes made by the legal system during and after the Vietnam War and are still being made today.

These are Americans who have volunteered to go in harm's way in defense of freedom. They may not have shed their blood in battle but they carry within them wounds we cannot see, wounds that we must help them heal.

STATE OWES IT TO VIETNAM VETERANS

State threatens to reduce funding for program, which would be another in a string of disappointments.
Wednesday, Jul. 21, 2010

Incoming!

That's what troops in Vietnam yelled when enemy rockets and mortars rained down on their firebases, camps and compounds.

Now Nam vets face more incoming rounds. During state budget committee proceedings, the state legislature has cut more than $7 million from Operation Welcome Home and the County Veterans Service Officers program. This despite the fact that the governor had proposed to fully fund those programs at $8.4 million authorized by law last year.

But faced with a $19 billion budget deficit, the politicians are showing how they're penny-wise and pound-foolish by attacking those who once served in their country's most unpopular war.

The Vietnam Veterans of America (VVA), founded in 1978 to lobby for those who served in Indochina during the decade of American involvement there, wants lawmakers to restore the funds-not just to help Nam vets but many of the state's total 2.7 million veterans. That includes men and women returning from Iraq and Afghanistan.

The veterans service officers help vets navigate the tortuous terrain of red tape sometimes required to get the benefits they've earned and deserve.

VVA says the officers are "highly trained and professional veterans advocates at the county level" who help their colleagues. The organization also says that these officers brought in almost $260 million in new federal money for California's veterans and their dependents "a return of $100 for every dollar spent by the state" on the officers.

The Sun-Star strongly agrees with VVA's position that the money for these officers should be restored. At a period of American history when our military is more and more distanced from the civilian population it protects and defends, we believe that as voters, citizens and taxpayers we should take care of those who have taken care of us. Many of them at huge personal sacrifices.

Give back the money for a useful program that helps veterans. That represents a much more meaningful way of supporting our troops than any bumper sticker, yellow ribbon or American flag.

Give back the money.

VA EASES CLAIMS PROCESS FOR VETERANS WITH PTSD

By Elaine Wilson
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON, July 12, 2010 - The Veterans Affairs Department will publish a final regulation tomorrow intended to ease the claims process and improve access to health care for veterans with post-traumatic stress disorder, VA officials announced today.

"This nation has a solemn obligation to the men and women who have honorably served this country and suffer from the often-devastating emotional wounds of war," Veterans Affairs Secretary Eric K. Shinseki said in a statement issued today. "This final regulation goes a long way to ensure that veterans receive the benefits and services they need."

The new rule, to be published in the Federal Register, will relax the evidence requirement if the PTSD stressor claimed by a veteran is linked to "fear of hostile military or terrorist activity and is consistent with the places, types and circumstances of the veteran's service," a VA news release said.

Currently, VA decision makers are required to confirm that a noncombat veteran actually experienced a stressor related to hostile military activity, the release said.

Under the new rule, VA no longer will require substantiation of a stressor tied to fear of hostile military or terrorist activity if a VA psychiatrist or psychologist can confirm that the experience recalled by a veteran supports a PTSD diagnosis and the veteran's symptoms are related to the stressor, a VA release said.

"With this new PTSD regulation, we are acknowledging the inherently stressful nature... of military service in which the reality and fear of hostile or terrorist activity is always present," Michael Walcoff, VA's acting undersecretary for benefits, said during a news conference today.

The regulation will eliminate the need to search for re-

ords to verify veterans' accounts, "often a very involved and protracted process," Walcoff said, and enable VA officials "to move more quickly to award more benefits to veterans suffering from PTSD."

Walcoff said he hopes the new regulation will encourage more veterans with PTSD to come forward, particularly those who have been deterred by a seemingly time-consuming and sometimes frustrating process.

More than 400,000 veterans currently are receiving compensation benefits for PTSD, VA officials said. And of the nearly 400,000 veterans treated at VA facilities for PTSD in fiscal 2009, nearly 70,000, or 19 percent, were veterans of operations Iraqi Freedom and Enduring Freedom.

However, the new regulation has the potential to benefit all veterans regardless of their period of service, Walcoff noted.

Dr. Robert A. Petzel, VA's undersecretary for health, said the regulation will be particularly beneficial for veterans who have had their military records damaged or destroyed, female veterans whose records don't specify they have combat experience, and veterans who have experienced combat but have no record of it.

"This is good news for America's veterans; in fact, it's a historic day," Petzel said. President Barack Obama called the changes a "long-overdue step" in his weekly address. "I don't think our troops on the battlefield should have to take notes to keep for a claims application," Obama said. "And I've met enough veterans to know that you don't have to engage in a firefight to endure the trauma of war." The new regulation not only will help veterans of the Afghanistan and Iraq wars, but "generations of their brave predecessors who proudly served and sacrificed in all our wars," the president said. "It's a step that proves America will always be here for our veterans, just as they've been there for us," he said. "We won't let them down. We take care of our own. And as long as I'm commander in chief, that's what we're going to keep doing."

A CASE OF THE A.S.S.

By Tom Bixby

Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, War Weary, Battle Fatigue, Pissed Off Veteran Syndrome. You are home from the war. You are out of harm's way. You think you are fine, but evidence to the contrary continues to build.

Something falls off a shelf at Toys-R-US. It makes a loud bang. Your muscles contract. You let out a small yell. You dive into a crouch and your hands fly up into a firing position as if you had a rifle. Your head whips toward the noise. Your kids freeze. "Whoa," says your eight year old daughter as she stares wide eyed and open mouthed at the monster that just leapt out of the closet ready to kill.

You never sleep for more than two hours at a time. You wake up thrashing and kicking. You take to sleeping on the couch because you're afraid you'll hurt your wife as you lash out in your sleep.

You don't know why you get so anxious when the tree trimmers are working nearby. That's because the thuds and the ground shudder the logs make when they fall don't bring back images of the soldier with his arm missing that ran by you at LZ Uplift while 155 rounds from the ammo dump fire were crashing all around. They just bring back the feelings.

You know the dog in the next block drives you up the wall but you have no idea that's because it sounds like the one that barked just before the grenades exploded the night the gooks came up out of the rice paddy and started blowing away the villagers you were supposed to protect.

It's been so many years and you didn't have it that bad compared to some troopers you tell yourself. Even so, the dreams, the night terrors and the body quakes keep coming back... and the pain, the pain is always, always there. The nagging gnawing, knotted ache in your lower back, that tightness in your whole right arm that runs from your trigger finger all the way around to your shoulder blade. That just couldn't be because part of you would like to swing your old M-16 across and hammer down the yuppie asshole that cut you off in his BMW.

Remember when that lady was giving you a hard time and all you wanted to do was take some of your own money out of the bank? Remember how you kept flashing on wanting to choke the bitch out? You couldn't believe those thoughts were coming from you and you tried to ignore them but they kept jumping into your head until you had a couple drinks and then a couple more and then finally that night you actually slept and before long you had a few drinks every night and then a few every day and by then you hardly noticed the pain and the dreams stopped, at least some of the worst ones.

Years went by and your wife left and then a couple of girlfriends and you couldn't understand why the women and your bosses would get so freaked out when you'd blow off a little steam. Why would they think you were going to get violent? You were in control. Hell, they just pissed you off and you told them how you felt, that's all. But you didn't realize your muscles had contracted like a cobra coiled to strike. You didn't realize your heart was chugging the same 180 beats a minute it did when you were shoulder to shoulder with your buddy firing on full tilt boogie for forty five minutes to keep the gooks from overrunning your bunker. You couldn't see what your wife saw, that your eyes were burning like the headlight on a locomotive about to come screaming out of a tunnel.

You've got a case of the A. S.S., man. A-S-S, you've got the Adrenalin Spill Sickness, the Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, the Soldier's Heart. You never came all the way home, Brother. You're still operating like somebody just yelled, "Gooks inside the wire!"

It doesn't matter what group you're with, you always feel like you're on the outside looking in. You keep to yourself because you know they wouldn't understand. Why would they? They think it's a big deal when they get the door dinged on their Mercedes. Not one of them ever saw a man on a bicycle crushed by a tank tread. It's a different planet to them.

They weren't with you at TET. They didn't see the truckloads and truckloads of freshly dead with the arms and the heads flailing and bobbing over the side while blood splashed off the tires creating a cloud of pink mist that followed the fallen all the way to their mass grave. They didn't see the forty charred bodies stacked like cord wood at the strongpoint along Highway QL-1. They don't know what it was like to listen to the mother that wailed for hours and hours and hours over her dead four year old daughter in Bong Son.

You don't like to think about these things because it makes it even harder to be around the citizens who pissed away their lives shopping for more shoes than they have room for at home while Bobby Wagner came home with no legs and Perdue and Soutar and Harrington lie cold in their coffins never having seen a single twenty-first birthday between them. When these thoughts do creep in, when a sound does startle you or some picture on TV breaks through your alcoholic fog, then you can't stop seeing the guy in the next bunker that was killed by friendly fire and you can't stop hearing his friends screaming, in vain, over and over against the long black night, "Medic... Medic... Medic!"

And then it comes flooding back... the stiff and rotting corpse of trooper you had to pull from the river, the blood spilling on your boots from the temple of the sniper wounded trucker at the bridge, the faces of your Vietnamese counterparts that were executed by the Viet Communists after you pulled out. And now you jolt and your vision goes almost black for a moment. You gasp for air. Your heart thumps off rhythm. Your throat tightens. You see the eyes. It's pitch black and he's almost thirty yards and more than forty years away but you can see his eyes in the fading red glow of the star cluster flare and the flashes from the rifle muzzles. He and another Cong are trying to hold up a third man who has already been hit and he looks straight into your eyes as your deadly rounds find him again and again driving him down and down and he never looks away from you as the deep black pit of eternity opens up and swallows his soul turning the thick dust of the roadway into a five foot puddle of deep red mud.

And now its forty years later... and you are weeping... and you can't explain why.

VVA CSC LEGISLATIVE REPORT

By Pete Conaty and Dana Nichol

Currently, a major priority for California's veterans is to get the Joint Conference Committee on the Budget to restore the full $8.4 million for the Governor's Operation Welcome Home (OWH) initiative. OWH is a statewide outreach initiative to connect each returning combat vet-

The Petaluma Museum Presents:

The Vietnam Experience

A Soldier's Story

Sept. 16th - Nov. 28th, 2010

NEW EXHIBIT HONORS VIETNAM VETERANS

The stories of local veterans who served in the Vietnam War are the focus of the Petaluma Museum's newest exhibit, "The Vietnam Experience: A Soldier's Story." The exhibition includes historic artifacts, photographs and documents interwoven with remarkable oral histories. Included is a historical timeline provided by CERA Exhibitions, a company that provides high quality exhibits to museums around the world.

The exhibit opens September 16th and runs until November 28th. The opening night reception for Museum members is at 6 p.m. September 16th and includes a special musical performance.

The exhibit is supplemented with material from the collections of the Pacific Coast Air Museum and Petaluma Military Museum to make the largest Vietnam War exhibit in the Bay Area. Highlights include simulated living conditions, a Reflection Wall, speaker series and the film, "The Vietnam War," which airs at 1:30 p.m. every Saturday.

"Our goal is to honor the men and women who have served their country, and educate the younger generation about the sacrifice they made," explains Joe Noriel, Museum president. "This is a significant year for this exhibit as it marks the thirtyfifth Anniversary of the fall of Saigon."

eran to the services that can help them transition successfully from military to civilian life. The Governor, in his May budget revision, inserted $8.4 million to help fund the County Veterans Service Officers who will be on the front lines of helping the veterans referred by OWH. Of the $8.4 million, there will also be $1 million in grants available for Veterans Service Organizations and non-profit veteran's assistance groups. However, the Legislature's Joint Budget Conference Committee voted to remove over $7 million from the Governor's funding proposal. The State Budget has not been finalized and there is still time to have the full funding restored.

The strategy is time consuming but straightforward; create an overwhelming groundswell of support from across the state and convince the Legislature how important this funding is to the state's veterans, their families, and citizens who are thankful for veteran's service. We have been circulating a legislative letter supporting restoration of the cuts. This letter will be signed by as many legislators as possible and delivered to the Conference Committee. To date, we have 44 signatures. A statewide effort has been made to garner the support of the major Veterans Service Organization (VSO) groups, individual posts, veteran's organizations, counties, and individual veterans. As of this writing, we have collected support letters from 16 counties, 11 VSO's, and 85 posts, chapters, and districts. Everyone is doing a great job of shaking the trees in their local communities and obtaining support letters from groups and individuals who an interest in helping veterans.

Please keep them coming!

We have also been active trying to create support and raise visibility on the issue via the media. So far, 5 articles have been published by major California newspapers. More are on the way. On August 5 at 1:30 pm at the State Capitol Governor's Conference Room there will be a press conference on the budget cuts. I am arranging to have leaders from the major VSO's and representatives from the women veterans, student veterans, and recently returned veterans communities. VVA-CSC will be actively involved in this effort. It will be important to show the public the face of Operation Welcome Home; our OEF/OIF young men and women- active, Guard, and reserve.

This month, the key is to build support, coordinate, and educate the Legislature on the importance of this funding. August is the last month of the legislative session. All bills will be heard and will "fly or die" by August 31 (when the Legislature adjourns for the year). The budget stalemate may still extend beyond that. The budget stalemate may actually work to our advantage because it gives us more time to build support and get this full funding back into the budget. Please contact your local Senators and Assemblymembers and ask them to support the Governor's proposal to fund Operation Welcome Home at the full $8.4 million.

State Senator Dave Cox (R-Fair Oaks) passed away on July 13. Senator Cox was a strong supporter of veteran's

WORRY ABOUT LASTING IMPACT OF AGENT ORANGE

MONTPELIER — William J. Whitney of Northfield did two tours of duty in Vietnam four decades ago, but until recently he didn't think that Agent Orange, a defoliant used by the U. S. military, might affect not only his health, but that of his children and grandchildren.

"I'm scared and I have a right to be," Whitney testified Saturday before a small audience of other Vietnam veterans, their families, Sen. Bernie Sanders, I-Vt., and representatives of Vermont's other members of Congress. "I went and served my country not knowing what my government was doing to us guys. They poisoned us."

Other Vietnam veterans also came to the microphone, their voices full of emotion as they told of mysterious illnesses that have plagued their children and grandchildren.

"It bothers me that I got into that stuff over there," said Andy McGrath of Rutland after recounting the health histories of several family members. "I don't know if their problems are from me. We used to sit on 55 gallon barrels and eat lunch. There are a lot of us guys who don't know what is going on with their families who want answers."

John Miner, Vermont State Council president, Vietnam Veterans of America, organized Saturday's hearing to provide Vermont's congressional delegation with anecdotal evidence of the multi-generational health problems showing up in families of people who fought in Vietnam. These veterans want the government to investigate the illness trends that some Vietnam veterans and their families have begun to identify. "We are fighting for all veterans, not just us," Miner said. "Because we are standing up, our government is waking up."

Sharon Perry drove more than seven hours from Cherryfield, Maine, to tell her story. Her husband, Reuben "Bud" Perry III, served two tours with the "brown water Navy," working on rivers in Vietnam. He died in 2005 "after six years of one disastrous illness after another," she said. "My oldest daughter was sick before her father was," Perry said. As a child, she had allergies, chronic infections and muscle spasms so severe she was unable to walk. Doctors said she was faking. Perry said now as an adult, her daughter's list of ailments is even longer. Perry and her daughter used the Internet to see if other families of Vietnam veterans had faced similar medical challenges. Perry said she's been collecting stories and she handed Miner a list. "That is the biggest thing we can do is get the word out," Perry suggested.

Linda Schwartz, commissioner of the Department of Veterans Affairs in Connecticut, but formerly an Air Force nurse during the Vietnam War and later a researcher, recounted the results of an analysis of members of the Air Force — a re-examination of data used earlier to conclude Agent Orange and its dioxin contaminant adversely affected airmen's offspring.

LIVE LIVES WORTHY OF FALLEN WARRIORS' SACRIFICES

By Donna Miles - American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON, May 31, 2010 — President Barack Obama called on the nation during a Memorial Day address at Joint Base Andrews, Md., to honor the legacy of its fallen warriors and to live lives worthy of their sacrifices.

"At its core, the nobility and majesty of Memorial Day can be found in the story of ordinary Americans who became extraordinary for the most simple of reasons: they loved their country so deeply, so profoundly, that they were willing to give their very lives to keep it safe and free," Obama told an assembly of several dozen servicemembers today after landing in Washington from a weekend in Chicago.

He initially had been slated to deliver his address at the Abraham Lincoln National Cemetery in Illinois, but torrential rains and lightning cancelled that event. Instead, he visited wounded veterans and their families receiving care at the Hines Veterans Affairs Hospital near Chicago.

Obama noted during his address at Andrews tonight the fallen warriors' shared belief in their country throughout its history, and willingness to sacrifice lives of comfort, and ultimately, life itself, to protect its ideals.

"They answered their country's call. They stepped forward. They raised their hand. They took an oath," he said. As they served their country in uniform throughout its history, they left their loved ones when duty called. In doing so, they liberated countries, ended the Holocaust, rid towns of insurgents and saved villages from the terror of violent extremists, he noted. They fought for freedom and the flag, the president said. But they also fought for each other, to bring their buddies home and keep their families safe. "And that is what they did, to their last breath," he said. "This is what we honor today: the lives they led, the service they rendered, the sacrifice they made — for us," he said. "In this time of war, we pay special tribute to the thousands of Americans who have given their lives during the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq and who have earned their place among the greatest of generations," he said. "And though our hearts ache in their absence, we find comfort in knowing that their legacy shines bright in the people they loved: America's Gold Star families." The legacy of America's fallen lives on, the president said.

It lives through their parents who instilled the values and virtues that led them to service. It lives through their spouses who gave the nation the person they cherished most. It lives through their children, whose parents gave their lives so they could live theirs. And it lives through those who fought alongside them — veterans and troops still serving in harm's way.

"Just as you keep alive the memory of your fallen friends, America must keep its commitments to you," Obama told the servicemembers. "That means providing the support our troops and families need, and the health care and benefits our veterans deserve. This is our sacred trust to all who serve, and upholding that trust is our moral obligation."

Obama called on all Americans to live lives worthy of the sacrifices its fallen heroes have made, and that the country's men and women in uniform continue to make every day. "The legacy of these fallen heroes lives on in each of us," he said. "The security that lets us live in peace, the prosperity that allows us to pursue our dreams, the freedoms that we cherish — these were earned by the blood and sacrifice of patriots who went before."

"Now it falls to us to preserve this inheritance for all who follow."

VIETNAM COMBAT LESSONS APPLY TODAY, MULLEN SAYS

WASHINGTON, June 1, 2010 – The military's top officer yesterday called on Vietnam veterans to stay connected with today's servicemembers, saying their lessons learned, especially with post-traumatic stress disorder, can help veterans of combat in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Navy Adm. Mike Mullen, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, made the comments as he led a Memorial Day observance at the Vietnam War Memorial here just before six names of fallen Vietnam veterans were added to the iconic, black marble wall.

"The Vietnam conflict was a life-defining experience for every American who lived during that era, and it continues to impact us all: the pain, the conflict, the healing," Mullen said, noting that Vietnam was his first war experience. "The lessons we learned in Vietnam were bought at a very great price. Acting on them is the best tribute we can pay to honor those who died."

Mullen noted that he and his wife, Deborah, came to The Wall after touring Arlington National Cemetery's Section 60 where many Vietnam veterans are buried near those fallen in Iraq and Afghanistan. "As we come to this very hallowed ground, in ways it is like coming home," he said. "I, too, have friends on The Wall. I have classmates on The Wall."

When the Afghanistan and Iraq wars began after Sept. 11, 2001, Mullen said, he vowed to do everything possible to prevent the disconnect that happened between the American public and the military during the Vietnam war. To his relief, he said, Americans "are so incredibly supportive of our military men and women now."

Mullen said he attributes the changed attitudes to the lessons learned from the Vietnam war era about supporting troops unconditionally. "During that time, as a country, we were unable to separate the politics from the people," he said. "We must never allow America to become disconnected from her military. Never."

Adm. Mike Mullen, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff addresses audience members at the annual Memorial Day Observance Ceremony at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C., on May 31, 2010. Mullen gave the keynote address and recognized the addition of six new names to the over 58,000 service members who perished in that war. DoD photo by U.S. Navy Petty Officer 1st Class Chad J. McNeeley (Click photo for screen-resolution image; high-resolution image available. "That's why this site, this wall, is so special," he continued. "Rather than separating us, this wall binds us together as a nation. It has become, in the words of General [Barry] McCaffrey, a national place of healing."

The memorial on the National Mall memorializes more than three million Americans who served during the Vietnam war and more than 58,000 who died from combat-related injuries and illnesses. The six names added yesterday are: Marine Lance Cpl. John E. Granville of Los Angeles, Marine Lance Cpl. Clayton K. Hough Jr. of Massachusetts, Army Capt. Edward F. Miles of New York, Army Sgt. Michael J. Morehouse of Kentucky, Army Lt. Col. William Taylor of Florida, and Marine Cpl. Ronald M. Viona of New York.

"As your loved ones now join their brothers and sisters, we hope this day helps to bring you closure and peace," Mullen told the six veterans' families. Mullen asked surviving Vietnam veterans to reach out to today's veterans, especially in reducing the stigma of mental health treatment. Whether coping with anxiety, depression or suicidal thoughts, he said, "having an experienced buddy you can turn to makes all the difference." Mullen said his friend, former Marine Corp commandant Michael W. Hagee has said, "Every Marine, every soldier he ever saw who was in combat suffered from post-traumatic stress. And I readily believe the same is true for today's ground forces."

He encouraged the veterans to share their experiences. "We know we stand on the shoulders of the Vietnam generation as our young Americans in uniform give all they have to provide our children and grandchildren a safer world," Mullen said. "Let us honor their legacy by learning from them, listening to one another, and staying connected in the future."
